Parents,

In consideration of Tropical Storm Nate, St. Katharine Drexel Preparatory School will cancel all school activities that had been scheduled for this weekend, October 6th, 7th, and 8th. Please take the necessary precautions to protect your family and property. Our prayer is for your family to remain safe during this time. Weather permitting, we plan to resume all school activities on Monday, October 9th. It is important that you stay tuned to WWL-TV for announcements regarding school closures next week.

This current storm is predicted to move into our area on Saturday night or early Sunday morning. As the storm approaches the coast, it will spin up tornadoes and present a storm surge risk. Since the storm is expected to intensify as it approaches the Gulf Coast, we must regard it as dangerous and prepare to remain hunkered down until the threat passes.

Again, we are asking that you take necessary precautions as the storm passes. Please educate your children about the hazards that might occur even after the storm passes. Downed power lines and debris may be in the streets and present various dangers to your family. Please take precautions.

Hopefully, we will return to school on Monday, October 9, 2017. The official news channel, WWL-TV, will announce any and all school closures. Please stay tuned to the news channel and pay close attention to emails, and school blasts.

May God bless you and your family!
